About the Newberry Center for Renaissance Studies

Founded in 1979, the Center serves scholars through the use of the library’s internationally renowned collections in the late medieval, Renaissance, and early modern periods in Europe and the Atlantic and Mediterranean worlds. Organized as an international consortium of 49 universities, the Center aims to integrate the resources of the Newberry into the educational process and to make available programs that are not feasible for individual institutions to mount alone.

The Center offers a wide range of programs in medieval, Renaissance, and early modern studies at the graduate and postdoctoral levels: lecture series, multidisciplinary seminars, workshops, conferences, symposia, graduate seminars for which students may receive academic credit, and intensive training in the techniques essential for primary research in these fields, including paleography, bibliography, codicology, and textual editing. Additionally, the Center provides a locus for a lively community of scholars who come from around the world to use the Newberry’s collections of manuscripts and printed books from the Middle Ages to the Napoleonic period.

Collection areas of special strength in medieval, Renaissance, and early modern studies comprise:

- early modern colonialism
- humanism, education, and rhetoric
- maps, travel, and exploration
- music and dance
- printing and book arts
- religion

Other strong subjects and genres include:

- French political pamphlets
- British local history and heraldry
- British political pamphlets, broadsides, and prints
- eighteenth-century periodicals, especially British and French
- historiography, historical theory, and philosophy of history
- neo-Latin literature; foreign languages and linguistics
- biographies
- women writers in all genres
- archival materials for Italy, Portugal, and the Spanish Empire
- Gypsy lore and Arthuriana

The Center for Renaissance Studies collaborates with the Folger Institute in Washington, DC, itself a consortium of 44 institutions. By a reciprocal arrangement, faculty members and graduate students from either consortium are eligible to participate in programs offered by the other.

Faculty and graduate students at Consortium schools are generally eligible to apply for travel funds to participate in programs or do research at the Newberry or Folger Shakespeare Library (some member institutions may limit eligibility to specific departments, colleges, or other units within the university).
