

THE NEWBERRY

NCAIS Summer Institute, July 26 - August 20, 2010

Research Titles

“A Confluence of Interests: Re-interpreting the Re-interment of Red Jacket”

Skawennio Barnes, Harvard University

“Sally New River: A Catawba Indian Woman in 18th Century South Carolina”

Brooke M. Bauer, University of North Carolina

“John Howard Payne: Forgotten Advocate for the Cherokee”

Lisa J. Brown, University of New Mexico

“The Rhetorical Legacy of Gertrude Simmons Bonnin, 1920-1930”

Paige Conley, University of Wisconsin – Milwaukee

“State formation and the Navajo Nation: the Origin of Legibility, 1868-1937”

Andrew Curley, Cornell University

“Dakota Treaties of 1851 and 1858”

Maeve Glass, Princeton University

“Nakona Ochanguwa”

Josh Horowitz, University of British Columbia

“The Roots of Radicalism: Pan-Indianism and Pan-Africanism in the Progressive Era”

Kyle Mays, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign

Agency and Resistance: Shawnee, Wyandot and Indian Mission Schools in the Nineteenth Century

Rebecca Lynn Nutt, Michigan State University

“Dakota responses to missionization and U.S. Nation-building at the Fort Snelling prison camp, 1862-1863”

Chris Pexa, Vanderbilt University

“We have always been here dancing’: Discovering the relationship between dance and diplomacy in 19th-century Native America

Katie Phillips, University of Minnesota

“Carlisle athletics and the Wind River Indian Reservation”

Stacy Sewell, University of Wyoming

“The World Will Fall to Pieces”: Native American Subsistence and Survival in the Columbia River Basin, 1830-1880

Ian Stacy, University of Montana, Missoula

“A Rumor of Biological War: The Contested History of a Smallpox Epidemic in Colonial L'Arbre Croche, Michigan”

Jason Sprague, Miami University of Ohio